

How to see the article published in today's papers

Our National Newspapers Database provides access to the Baltimore Sun, Christian Science Monitor, New York Times, Wall Street Journal and Washington Post.

When you first get to the database you will see a search box and a list of the newspapers available.

If you want to browse the articles published today, scroll down to that list of newspapers and click "Search" next to the newspaper you want to look at.

Scroll down slightly until you see the Publication Date dropdown box. In this box, choose the “On this date” option.

The screenshot shows a search interface with the following elements:

- Two search input fields, each followed by an "in" dropdown menu set to "Anywhere".
- An "AND" dropdown menu.
- An "Add a row" button.
- A "Limit to:" section with a checked "Full text" option.
- A "Publication date:" dropdown menu that is open, showing options: "All dates", "Last 7 days", "Last 30 days", "Last 3 months", "Last 12 months", "Last 3 years", "On this date..." (highlighted in blue), "After this date...", "Before this date...", and "Specific date range...". A red arrow points to the "On this date..." option.
- Four "Look up" buttons: "Look up Subject headings (all)", "Look up Companies/organizations", "Look up People", and "Look up Locations".
- A "Search" button and a "Clear form" button.

Now enter the month/day/year you would like to browse, and click the Search button. A list of articles from this newspaper published on the date you choose will now be displayed as your search results.

The screenshot shows the search interface with the date selection fields filled out:

- The "Publication date:" dropdown menu is now set to "On this date...".
- Below it are three input fields: "Any Month" (dropdown), "Any Day" (dropdown), and "yyyy" (text input).
- A red arrow points from the "Any Day" dropdown to the "Search" button.
- The "Search" button and "Clear form" button are visible.
- The "Look up" buttons remain visible.
